Governor Hassan Directs Flags to Half-Staff in Honor of Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day on December 7

CONCORD – Honoring the 75th anniversary of the attack on the United States at Pearl Harbor and paying tribute to the sacrifices of those who were at Pearl Harbor that infamous day, Governor Maggie Hassan has proclaimed Wednesday, December 7, 2016, as “Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day” in New Hampshire.

“The course of history for our great nation and the world changed with the horrific attack at Pearl Harbor 75 years ago,” Governor Hassan said. “This solemn occasion is an important opportunity to join together in honoring the sacrifices of the brave lives lost that day, as well as those who survived and those who courageously went on to defend our nation in World War II. Because of their selfless sacrifices, our country and world are safer and stronger. I join all Granite Staters, Americans and people across the world in remembering this dark day in our nation’s history and in expressing our profound gratitude for the brave men and women who sacrificed bravely to protect their fellow citizens and defend our shared values of freedom, liberty and equality.”

In honor of the lives lost in the attack at Pearl Harbor, Governor Hassan has directed flags to half-staff on Wednesday, December 7, 2016.
